Background Checks & Drug Screening for Volunteer Responders

An easy and efficient way to extinguish doubts about first responder volunteers

Firefighters as well as EMS and rescue service heroes are trained for a host of daily challenges so when the bell sounds, they're ready to react with reliable resources—which hopefully includes a sound team of volunteers.

Safety First

To fully protect their own organizations as well as the communities they serve, it's important firefighters and other first responders trust the volunteers beside them. Whether paid or unpaid, all first responders should submit to background checks and drug screenings before climbing aboard to guarantee they are drug-free and without criminal records.

We'll Take It From Here

The background screening experts at JD Palatine (JDP) partnered with the National Volunteer Fire Council (NVFC) to develop First Responder Search & Review (FRS&R)—the industry's most qualified background screening service for fire, EMS and rescue service organizations. With FRS&R, you have an easy and effective way to determine whether prospective volunteers are ready, worthy and able to join the team.

Ready When You Aren't

While firefighters are experts in their field, JD Palatine is the best at what it does. In addition to conducting background checks and screening for drugs, JDP's First Responder Search & Review service includes 24-hour access to its dedicated customer support team. Well-versed at navigating the complex issues that sometimes arise during the screening process, JDP's customer service reps can address concerns, answer questions and troubleshoot situations anytime of the day or night.
